Designers compete for a $50,000 prize on HGTV's new summer show Beach Flip. Cohost Josh Temple, center, keeps the energy level pumped up.

"It's amazing what paint can hide," cohost David Bromstad noted after peeking in on the designers mid-reno.

These are the condos the designers had to flip.

From left: Loren Ruch, HGTV VP of programming partnerships; Beach Flip cohosts Josh Temple and Nicole Curtis; me; and Beach Flip cohost David Bromstad. I brought 30 pairs of flip-flops to give away on set. David fell hard for this red, white, and blue pair!

To read my behind-the-scenes Beach Flip Q&A, go to hgtv.com/beach-flip-hosts.

flipping houses + beach = fun

A few months ago, HGTV invited me to appear on their new show Beach Flip. (Yes!) Here's the scoop: It's a design competition show that takes place on the Gulf Coast of Alabama. Four teams each transform an outdated condo into a dreamy beach retreat. Josh Temple, David Bromstad, and Nicole Curtis mentor the teams and judge their work. The team that does the smartest flip—in other words, adds the most value to the home—wins $50,000 and a feature in HGTV Magazine. (The story will be in our October issue.) I can't give anything away, but I can say that this was real reality TV. The pressure was intense, and every designer was in it to win it. As John said, "These teams started out playing it friendly and safe, but soon the fire of competition kicked in fiercely." I toured the finished condos and was super impressed with the results. There are lots of clever ideas worth tuning in to see.

Back at the magazine, we were inspired by the beach, too. On page 75, we feature the best shore-inspired finds that would look great in any home anywhere. Do I think houses in Iowa can have cabana-stripe rugs and sea glass-color lamps? Heck yeah! Our outdoor party section (page 125) also boosts the fun factor in this issue. We feature 28 plates that won't break, a wheelbarrow as an ice bin, and the cutest DIY paper fans ever. If all that doesn't make you want to take a big bite out of summer, I'm not sure what will. Enjoy the sunshine!

dear HGTV magazine,

Readers tell us what they think and share photos of their own projects.

I loved the “His, Hers, & Theirs” home tour in your January/February issue. It was refreshing to see such a complex and layered interior in the magazine. Brittany and Jim Flowers have great original style with a modern flair. Show me more like this!

—Meryl Rotch, Bethel Park, PA

The bath towel story in your

May issue (“Stop Hanging On to Your Old Towels!”) kicked me into redecorating mode. I finally faced my own tired bathroom towel situation, replacing the faded green ones I’d had for years with a colorful, not-so-matchy combination inspired by the ones you featured.

—Melissa Davis, Mesa, AZ

Your paint-themed May issue was the best ever, with so many great ideas for anyone looking to redecorate. I wish I’d had it in hand when I was trying to convince my husband that we should paint the dated, rustic brick wall in our family room. It took me three years, but he finally agreed a few months ago. Now we couldn’t be happier with how such a simple, inexpensive change transformed our house.

—Carol Pattee, Oshkosh, WI

I was so pleased you discussed releasing helium balloons into the air in May’s “How Bad Is It?” I’ve been involved in sea turtle rehabilitation in Florida for 17 years and agree that letting go of helium balloons is super bad for marine life.

—Connie Murk, Sarasota, FL

The bright colors in your magazine really helped when I was picking a color for my own front door. I opted for Decisive Yellow by Sherwin-Williams, which stands out against our home’s gray siding.

—Natalie Bushaw, Inver Grove Heights, MN

From our cover to your home

I’d been holding on to an antique settee for years, waiting to find the right fabric, and bam—there it was, on your January/February cover. I had an upholsterer re-cover it for me using that same print, and I’m thrilled with the result.

—DEDE WEST, TEMECULA, CA

“The High/Low List” is the best column in your magazine. It’s why I keep subscribing. My favorite item in the May edition was the petite end table with arched details from homedecorators.com. Lucky me, it was one of the lows!

—Sue Marcellus, Kansas City, MO

That was a super paint index you compiled (“Giant Paint Index”) for your May issue. Who doesn’t love an extra-long pullout page of pretty colors? It’s frame-worthy! What a great way to inspire readers to get out their paint rollers and brushes.

—Shante Jones, Oakland, CA

A story that you ran last April

(“Around the House With a Ladder Shelf”) stuck with me, and I finally put the tips I learned to good use in my small kitchen. I spray-painted a shelf I already had, then lined it with contact paper to protect it like you did. Thanks for teaching me to use an old piece in a new way.

—Bridget Gallo, Redlands, CA

I’ve been refurbishing furniture since I was in my 20s. Now I’m 73 and I still love finding pieces to make over. It’s no wonder a friend sent me HGTV Magazine. I’ve really enjoyed all the tips from people who love redoing furniture as much as I do.

—Judy Lebsack, Ocala, FL

Over the past few issues, I have been thrilled to see a revival of gold and brass finishes in the pages of your magazine. I particularly enjoyed the decor of the Georgia ranch house in the May story “2 Parts Quirky, 1 Part Classic.” The warmth of the gold items featured feels so homey to me.

—Laura O’Gara, Henderson, NV

Thanks for focusing on paint in the May issue! Seeing the HGTV stars’ favorite colors made me want to repaint my whole house, starting with our basement. I also picked up a Handy paint pail based on your “cool tool” recommendation, and that thing is fantastic! It made the job so much easier.

—Megan Hoyer, Woodbury, MN

I’m a big fan of your regular paint column “Wow! What Color Is That?” and wanted to share how I used my favorite color, blue, at home. When my kitchen was being renovated, I painted the island Bermuda Blue by Benjamin Moore—aptly named since I live near the beach!

—Donna Kwiatkowski, Bay Head, NJ

© 2015 Kraft Foods

Your May issue came just in time to spark a Mother's Day DIY gift idea. On the last page, where HGTV stars offered alternate uses for photo frames, Joanna Gaines suggested framing old brooches. I re-created the look with my grandmother's collection for my mom. She loved it!

—Erica Fiorini, Rock Tavern, NY

I've enjoyed your magazine since it debuted, and I like to give gift subscriptions. I was delighted when my adult granddaughter said the magazine has been the best present ever. It's given her tons of decorating ideas to use in the new house she and her husband are buying.

—Jaye Denman, Jackson, MS

How smart of you to reupholster a chair using a drop cloth (May's "Fresh Ideas With Paint"). I liked the idea so much, I tried it myself. Instead of splatter-painting it, I kept mine neutral to match my living room. Working with a drop cloth rather than fabric was affordable and easy.

—Judy Curry, Albany, NY

MAKEOVER magic

WHEN BRITNEY AND JOE MOVED INTO THEIR FIRST HOUSE THEY WERE THRILLED TO HAVE A PLACE OF THEIR OWN TO ENTERTAIN FAMILY AND FRIENDS. Britney also started baking as a hobby several times a week. However, the closed floor plan and outdated kitchen held them back from doing more of what they love. They were desperate for a new kitchen and entertaining space, but after paying for college and a wedding, there wasn't a lot of room left in the budget. The newlyweds decided that they had to make do—until HGTV's America's Most Desperate Kitchens and Macy's came along!

Get the look: THE CELLAR CAKESTAND WITH MINI-DOME, THE CELLAR STACKABLE 3-TIER CAKE STAND

Britney always wanted nice bakeware and serving pieces but felt they would look out of place. Now she is proud to display her baked goods on these beautiful stands from Macy's.

Buy in a snap. Scan these pages using the free Digimarc Discover app to find all of these items at macys.com/hgtv.

"This makeover is everything we wanted but nothing we could have ever imagined."

Get the look: ELLIOT FABRIC MICROFIBER 2-PIECE SECTIONAL SOFA, RUSTON COFFEE TABLE

With the new, open floor plan, the couple created a conversation space near the kitchen, with a sectional sofa and a coffee table, that allows them to entertain while they cook.

Get the look: BARSTOW SANTA MARIA FABRIC ACCENT CHAIR, NATALIE FAUX LEATHER OTTOMAN

Joe likes the splashes of color from the furniture, decor, and accessories from Macy's. These items make their home a reflection of their colorful personalities.

Get the look: CHAMPAGNE DINING ROOM SET, NORITAKE COLORWAVES DINNERWARE, ONEIDA ICARUS 50-PIECE FLATWARE SET, CHILEWICH BOUCLE PLACEMAT AND CHILEWICH SOLID LINEN NAPKIN

Britney and Joe are looking forward to hosting holidays now that they have a welcoming dining room set, matching tableware, and table linens.

how bad is it...

...to store tomatoes in the fridge?

A chilled tomato is not a tasty tomato. Once the fruit reaches a temperature of about 39°F, the chemical compounds that give it its smell and taste begin to break down, causing it to become bland and mealy, says Kristen Quito, chef at Le Verdure, the vegetable-centric restaurant in New York City's Eataly food market. Too-low temps can also stop a tomato from fully ripening. To guarantee your salads and tomato-based dishes always taste delish, store the produce on the counter at room temperature. It should last there for four to six days.

...to use the same loofah over and over again?

Do so and you may be lathering more than just body wash onto your skin. While those spongy poufs make great exfoliators, they also make a cozy home for bacteria, says Heidi Waldorf, M.D., director of laser and cosmetic dermatology at The Mount Sinai Medical Center. The problem, says Dr. Waldorf, is that loofahs never completely dry out—and a wet environment attracts bacteria. When the bacteria interact with your skin, it can lead to bumpy, uncomfortable infections, such as folliculitis and impetigo. To keep your skin looking its best, use a synthetic loofah, and machine-wash it weekly in a hot-water cycle. If you prefer a natural loofah, spring for a new one each month.

...to swim right after eating?

In some cases it's worth waiting 30 minutes after chowing down. If you have a heavy meal before engaging in a particularly vigorous swim, you could end up with stomach cramps, nausea, or acid reflux, says Roshini Raj, M.D., a gastroenterologist and clinical associate professor of medicine at NYU School of Medicine. "You're most likely to feel uncomfortable if the food is high in fat or protein, like a hero sandwich with chips, because those take longer to digest," she says. But if you've had only a light snack—say a granola bar or a piece of fruit—you're in the clear. Dive right in!

not bad at all!
(if you've had a light snack) pretty bad!

(if you've had a heavy meal)

...to cut down overhanging branches from a neighbor's tree?

Don't rev up that chain saw just yet. First check with a local attorney specializing in property law, since restrictions on how to handle this type of issue vary by state. "People think they have a right to cut branches that encroach on their property, but that's not the law," says Barri Kaplan Bonapart, an attorney in California and author of Understanding Tree Law. Try chatting with your neighbor to hash out the problem. If that doesn't work, have a licensed, bonded, and insured tree-care company assess the situation, then inform your neighbor of your plan. Just take care not to trespass on your neighbor's property or damage the tree, which could lead to a several-thousand-dollar fine.

...to swat at a bee?

Keep your hands to yourself. While a bee would rather fly away from you than attack you, that can change if you swat at it, says Robbin Thorp, Ph.D., professor emeritus of entomology at the University of California, Davis. It's possible a bee would see this as a threat and defend itself by stinging you. To save yourself the pain, says Thorp, calmly walk away or take shelter from any bee that gets too close for comfort. You know, buzz off.

really bad!

Leave me beeee or I might sting you!

...to take a shower during a thunderstorm?

Shocker: You actually can get struck by lightning in the shower. It's incredibly rare—struckbylightning.org, a nonprofit that keeps track of lightning strikes, lists just nine incidents since 2004—but if a bolt of lightning strikes your house, the resulting surge of electricity will most likely follow either the plumbing or the wiring to the ground. If it takes the plumbing path, the voltage can jump from your showerhead to you, says John Jensenius, lightning safety specialist for the National Weather Service. That could lead to a painful jolt or, worst-case scenario, stop your heart. So wait until the storm has passed to bathe, and avoid other watery activities like washing dishes.

super bad!

...to leave the AC on while you're away for the weekend?

It depends how you feel about wasting money. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, the average American household spends $240 per year on home cooling. So turning the air conditioner off for 48 hours (or more) can save a few bucks. To keep your pad from broiling while you're gone, close the blinds and curtains, suggests Meg Waltner, manager for building energy policy for the Natural Resources Defense Council. If you don't want to shut the AC off completely, crank up the temp by seven degrees or more. "That will save energy—and you won't be sweating when you return home," says Waltner.

what's the difference

Finally! Clarification on some commonly confused household terms.

rose VS. rose of sharon

A symbol of love and a favorite for bouquets, roses come in hundreds of colors, shapes, and sizes. Often fragrant, they grow on climbing vines and shrubs as far north as Alaska.

The rose of Sharon isn't a rose but a heat-loving hibiscus. This easy-care flowering shrub is known for its hardiness and scentless, trumpet-shaped blossoms, many with a red center.

griddle VS. grill pan

With a large, flat surface and a low lip for easy flipping, a griddle is ideal for making batches of pancakes and fried eggs. It comes in round, rectangular, and square styles.

A grill pan has ridges that elevate food, allowing fat to drain off for lighter-tasting results. It also creates sear marks like the ones an outdoor grill makes.

antique furniture VS. vintage furniture

According to federal guidelines, an antique is an object 100 years or older. An antique's rarity, condition, and level of craftsmanship tend to boost its value.

There's no government-regulated—or even clear-cut—definition of vintage. But it usually refers to items that are at least 20 years old and sought after by collectors.

dish towel VS. tea towel

The no-frills workhorse of the kitchen, a dish towel is mainly used for drying dishes and hands. Choose absorbent, lint-free cotton or linen, which can withstand frequent laundering.

Hand-embroidered tea towels were originally just for show. Now they're mostly mass-produced, but they are still primarily used to pretty up a kitchen, not to keep it tidy.

The best dinners are the ones with lively conversation.

Different perspectives make the meal better and more interesting. We approach agriculture the same way. Because growing enough food for a growing world, and doing it in a sustainable way, requires a wide range of ideas and resources. That's why we partner with farmers, nonprofits, and many others. It's time for a bigger discussion about food.

cultivating collaboration

Working Together to Make Balanced Meals More Accessible to All

Food doesn't just bring families together. Farmers, nonprofits, agricultural organizations and many others come together to collaborate on sustainable farming solutions. Here are 4 ways they are working together to help farmers have better harvests while using resources more efficiently (and make delicious, balanced meals more accessible to every family).

1 harvesting solutions

Farmers use data services that help them understand how soil and water conditions vary across their land, providing custom strategies that help them make better decisions throughout the growing season and ultimately have better harvests.

2 weather (or not)

Weather experts have created mobile apps that allow farmers to check weather and field conditions remotely—helping them find the ideal time to plant in order to use water more efficiently and have better harvests.

3 buzz-worthy

Farmers, beekeepers, nonprofits, agricultural organizations, government agencies and others are working together to protect this busy pollinator. About 1/3 OF THE FOOD eaten by Americans comes from crops pollinated by honey bees, including fruits, vegetables and nuts!*

and worst the best time to...

...paint your house, reseed your lawn, even grocery shop!

...clean your gutters

BEST: Early spring and late fall, after the leaves have finished falling from nearby trees. Clearing gutters twice a year prevents built-up debris, such as sticks and bird and animal nests, from weighing down the gutters.

WORST: Early fall, before all the leaves have turned and fallen. Also, put off this chore when the ground is wet or slippery, which makes using a ladder unsafe.

A colorful illustration of home maintenance tasks. On the left, a man in white overalls and a red shirt stands on a ladder, painting the white siding of a yellow house with green shutters. A brick chimney is visible on the roof. On the right, a man in a blue cap and white shirt drives a yellow steamroller on a driveway. The background features a blue sky with white clouds and green bushes with yellow flowers at the base of the house.

...get your chimney inspected

BEST: Spring, when business in the field is slow. Companies might offer discounted services this time of year, and you'll have several months to get repairs done before the cold weather returns.

WORST: The fall. Chimney pros' busy season hits as summer winds down, meaning it could take weeks to get one to your house. Even then, freezing temps and snow could delay repairs.

...paint your house's exterior

BEST: On a dry day when the forecast calls for a temperature between 50°F and 95°F and it won't dip below freezing at night—usually early summer.

WORST: When it's about to rain, humid, or chilly—below 50°F during the day and 32°F at night. Avoid wind too. It makes being on a ladder difficult and potentially dangerous.

...pave your driveway

BEST: Early summer through early fall, when the ground is fully thawed out and can be tightly packed to create a smooth surface for pavers or asphalt. If you're using asphalt, pave when you're not expecting guests—the surface has to dry for 48 to 72 hours before you can drive on it.

WORST: Spring, when the weather is typically wet and the ground may still be partially frozen, which could cause lumps in the driveway's foundation.

...buy a major appliance

BEST: September and October. These months are just ahead of new model releases, so stores get anxious to clear their inventory. Also look for sales during weekends before or after holidays like Presidents' Day, Memorial Day, the Fourth of July, and Labor Day.

WORST: November, December, and January, when you're most likely to pay full retail price.

...grocery shop

BEST: For the biggest savings, hit the store the same day its circular comes out (Wednesday or Thursday in most areas).

To avoid crowded aisles, shop Monday or Tuesday between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. if you can.

WORST: Weekends, when stores draw the most people, and after 6 on weeknights, when you'll battle tired, cranky shoppers. Also note that on-sale items may be out of stock the day after the circular is released; wait a day and they should be back on shelves.

...hire an exterminator

BEST: Schedule routine pest treatments for a time when kids and pets can stay in another room for a few hours. The pro will tell you if you need to leave the house and for how long.

WORST: For outdoor treatments, when it's raining. Most products must be carefully applied and allowed to dry quickly—tough in wet weather.

...run your oven's self-cleaning feature

BEST: When you won't need the kitchen for a while. The oven's self-clean cycle takes three or more hours and can create funky fumes, so open the windows and hang out elsewhere in the house.

WORST: Before bed or when you're not home. Oven grime could get overly smoky or actually ignite. Avoid this feature before a big holiday too. The extreme heat could damage the oven's electrical parts or the door's latch, which you'd need to get fixed before using the oven again.

...plant a tree

BEST: Spring, after the ground has thawed and before the tree you want to plant has sprouted all its leaves, or early fall.

WORST: Midsummer. The heat and process of transplanting can stress the tree, giving it less energy to settle its roots into its new home.

...reseed your lawn

BEST: Fall if you live in a cool climate; spring or summer if you live somewhere warm. Grasses grown in colder climates, such as Kentucky bluegrass and fine fescue, need cool soil and adequate rainfall to establish their roots. In warmer areas, you might be using Bermuda grass or zoysia, both of which prefer temperatures in the 70s or higher to get started. Plant those in late spring or by midsummer.

WORST: Midsummer for cold-climate grasses. Heat poses a challenge for grasses trying to grow their roots, and weeds are more likely to fight for real estate. For warm-climate grasses, the worst time to plant is in the early fall. Seeds won't have enough time to establish themselves before temperatures drop.

...plant bulbs

BEST: Six weeks before your area's first frost date for spring-blooming bulbs like daffodils and tulips (to find this date for your area, go to almanac.com). For summer-blooming bulbs like cannas and other lilies, plant in late spring, when the chance of frost is over.

WORST: Early in the spring, when cold, wet soil can cause bulbs to rot.

THE SECRETS TO A Scentsational SUMMER PARTY

With both Veronica and her husband working full-time and four boys under the age of six, she has a lot to balance—but in the summer she loves to make time to entertain her family and friends at home. Her secret? A routine of simple solutions. YOU TOO CAN CREATE A SCENTSATIONAL SUMMER PARTY—AND WITH THESE FOUR SCENTSIBLE TIPS FROM SNUGGLE® IT'S NEVER BEEN EASIER.

freshen Up

Tuck SNUGGLE® EXHILARATIONS® SHEETS into discreet places around your home, like the bottom of a storage bin or under seating cushions. This will keep your home smelling fresh and ready for guests!

2

Toss table linens into the dryer with a SNUGGLE® EXHILARATIONS® SHEET before your guests arrive to quickly eliminate any wrinkles and add a last-minute boost of scent.

Dish it Out

Boost the colors on your table with fresh summer ingredients such as cucumbers, tomatoes, and watermelon.

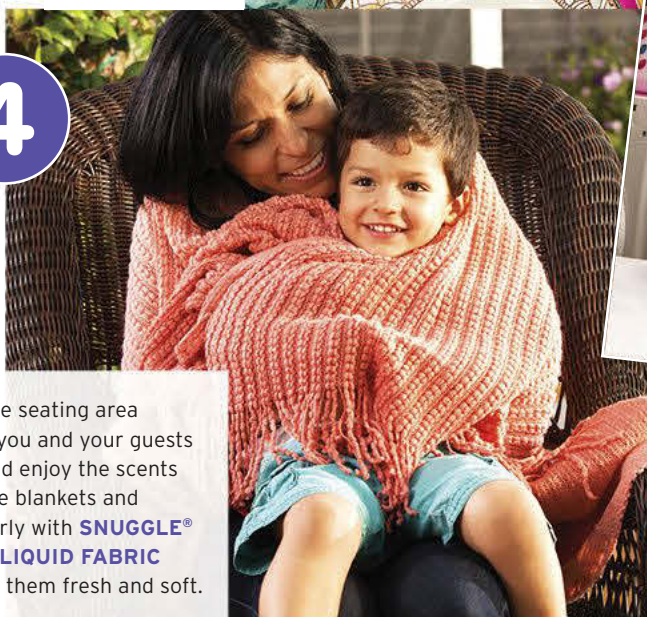

For even more freshness, wash your linens with long-lasting SNUGGLE SCENT BOOSTERS®.

Take a Seat

Create a comfortable seating area outside that allows you and your guests to sit back, relax, and enjoy the scents of summer. Wash the blankets and pillow covers regularly with SNUGGLE® EXHILARATIONS® LIQUID FABRIC SOFTENER to keep them fresh and soft.

Snuggle® offers a variety of scent collections that can appeal to all tastes and provide long-lasting scents from wash to wash. Find your scent at SNUGGLE.COM

what your appliances are saying behind your back

Listening in on their biggest gripes can save you time, money—and major hassles.

My shelves are clean, but—whoa!—my gasket is gross!

REFRIGERATOR You're wasting moolah if you're not de-griming your fridge's gasket, the rubber seal around the door. A gasket gunked up with food and liquid spills compromises the airtight seal, forcing the fridge to use more electricity to keep the inside cool. Clean the gasket with soap and warm water regularly, and replace it if you see cracks, warps, or tears.

If they ever want to eat, they have to stop peeking!

SLOW COOKER Lifting the lid on a slow cooker while it's working is tempting, but even a fast look-see interrupts the cooking process by letting steam escape. How inefficient is a quick glance? For each peek, you'll need to add 15 minutes to the total cook time.

Hello! I'm not a contortionist.

HAIR DRYER It looks tidier, but winding the cord tightly around the dryer after each use can stress the electrical wiring. Over time, kinked wires can spark or the dryer can short out. To prolong your dryer's life span, either let the cord hang free or gather and loosely secure it with Velcro.

I'm s-l-o-w-l-y being strangled.

VACUUM A vacuum with a rapidly spinning brush roller often falls victim to human and animal hair. Long strands coil python-like around the rollers, flattening the brushes and jamming the turning mechanism. The result: The machine can no longer pull in debris effectively, and the agitator belt might die. Head off trouble by periodically removing the brush roller and snipping hair with scissors or tearing it out with a seam ripper.

help wanted

They don't know I'm timing them.

ELECTRIC TOOTHBRUSH

The slightly slower vibration you feel every 30 seconds? It's a timer to help you be a better brusher. When you feel it, move on to a different part of your mouth. After the dentist-recommended two minutes of brushing, some models will buzz or shut off.

How embarrassing—I'm still on my original factory settings.

TELEVISION Start watching that brand-new TV without calibrating it and you're probably not getting the best picture quality. You can adjust variables like color, brightness, contrast, and sharpness yourself (check the manual for how-tos), or you can hire someone from the store where you purchased the TV to help.

Sigh. They're never happy with my work.

TOASTER Ignoring the setting dial—the knob with numbers that fine-tunes how light or dark the bread gets—can leave you with consistently under- or overdone toast. Change the setting based on not only the thickness of the bread but also the freshness: Turn the dial lower for slightly stale bread and higher for fresh slices.

Give me some air, people!

It's not my fault the glasses are dirty.

DISHWASHER Chances are it's an operator error if the dishes on the top don't get clean. That's because in most dishwashers, the main spray arm is located under the bottom rack. Cover it with a pot or a bowl and the water jets get blocked. The solution: Tuck large dishes and cookware in the corners or off to the sides, and check the manual for loading suggestions specific to your model.

WASHING MACHINE When you shut the door of a front-loader washing machine between loads, moisture can get trapped inside the drum and the door seal. The damp, dark atmosphere can result in a musty smell—or mold. Prevent mildew and odor by leaving the door wide open after every wash so the drum dries out. Help it along by wiping down the door, drum, and door seal with a dry rag after each use.

Where food becomes love.

Where children learn just by watching.

Where failed recipes become famous stories.

Does anyone even read my manual?

OVEN It's a shocker to owners of newer models, but lining an oven's bottom with foil (which can fuse to the interior) and spraying the inside with oven cleaner (which could ruin the porcelain) are no-nos. Doing either or both can void your warranty, something manufacturers usually spell out in the manual. Skip over that info and you'll pay the repair bills yourself.

This ice is hard work. Where do they think we are, Jamba Juice?

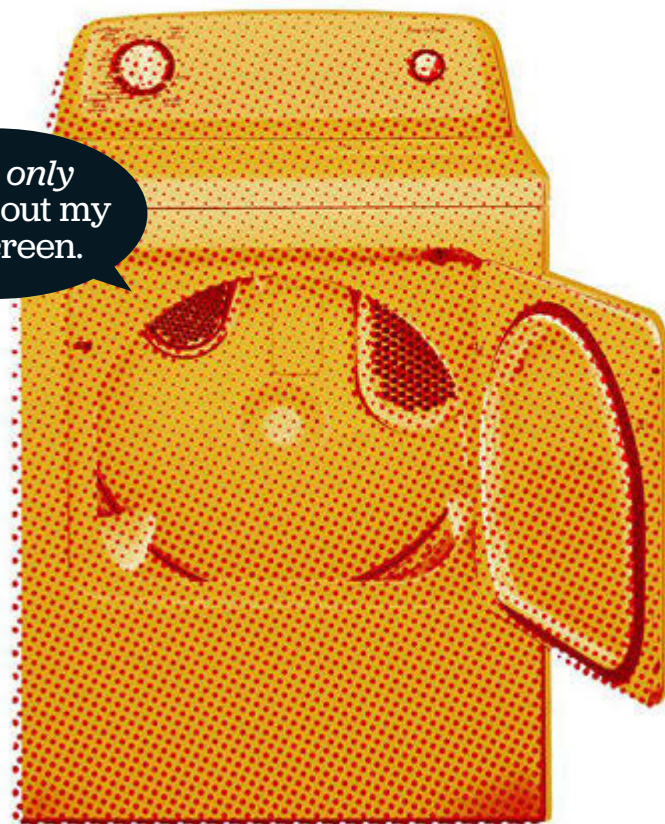

BLENDER Some high-performance blenders with professional-level motors and powerful blades can pulverize ice and frosty berries for years. But not all blenders can withstand the stress. If you're crushing rock-hard frozen stuff regularly, invest in a model with at least 1,400 watts rather than the typical 500.

My steam button exists for a reason.

IRON Ironing wrinkles out of cotton, linen, and denim is easier and faster when the fabric is slightly moistened. If the clothing you're pressing is bone-dry, hit the steam button to dampen the fibers, which causes them to relax. Fill the water reservoir at least halfway so you don't have to refill between garments—and if there's H₂O left over, empty it to prevent mineral buildup.

They only care about my lint screen.

DRYER Lint—which leads to many of the 15,000 dryer fires a year—can fall through the lint screen and build up inside the crevices of the dryer, causing a potential fire hazard. Clear fuzz off the screen after each load, and use a long, flexible brush to clean inside its compartment. Once a year, clean out the entire venting system all the way to the exterior ductwork, or hire a pro to help.

BY FARROW & BALL

“Straddling the fence between blue and green, this is a hard-to-pin-down color—which is great. It’s a chameleon you can pair with coral, cobalt blue, and teal, like the headboard and window shades. I think either/or colors are very versatile, especially in a bedroom.”

keep your flowers looking good

- Use lukewarm water rather than cold to encourage flowers to open more quickly.
- Never stick cut blooms in direct sun—they will wilt.
- Keep leaves out of vase water. They can breed bacteria that kill plants.
- Don't own flower snips? Cut blooms at an angle with a sharp knife, not scissors, which can crush stems.
- Start every arrangement by putting three stems in the vase at an angle, each facing a different way. Fill in the spaces between them and presto—a perfect arrangement every time!

Journey to HOME

A YOUNG TEXAN COUPLE BUILDS THE HOME OF THEIR DREAMS

AS MATT & MARISSA DICKERSON

PLANNED FOR THEIR FUTURE, THEY WERE EXCITED TO EXPAND THEIR FAMILY, AND NEEDED A HOUSE IN KATY, TEXAS, WITH MORE SPACE.

But the journey to home is full of twists and turns. As they searched for the home of their dreams, they couldn't find something suited to their needs in the ideal location. So they decided to make their dreams a reality, and build it.

Matt and Marissa had used a different lending company on their first home, but after speaking with Mortgage Banker Sam Nader about Chase's Rate Cap Program, they knew Chase was the right lender for them.

With Chase's Rate Cap Program, when you see a mortgage rate you like, you can hold it for up to 12 months—and if rates drop during that period, you'll get the lower rate.

SAM NADER
Mortgage Banker,
Chase

Matt, Marissa, and their beagle-shepherd mix, Macy, in the front yard of their new home.

"Building your own home is exciting! Not only do you get to choose the layout, but you can choose the lot to build on."

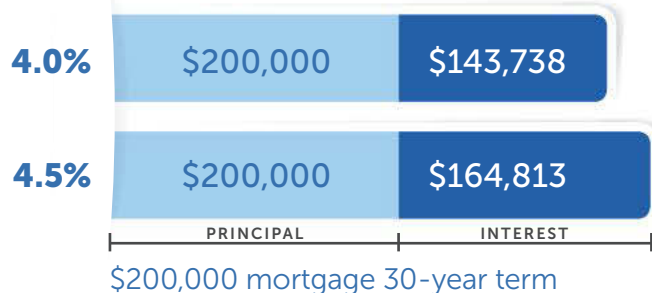

-Matt & Marissa

MATT AND MARISSA enjoyed seeing their vision come to life as their new home was built. Thanks to the Rate Cap Program, they had peace of mind in knowing their final mortgage rate was never in danger of going up. Now they are settled in and enjoying a home that suits all of their needs—and has room for Macy to roam free. “This house is something we built together and we plan on staying here for a very long time,” says Matt.

“We are excited to raise a family in this neighborhood and home for years to come.”

Why it's important to lock in a rate

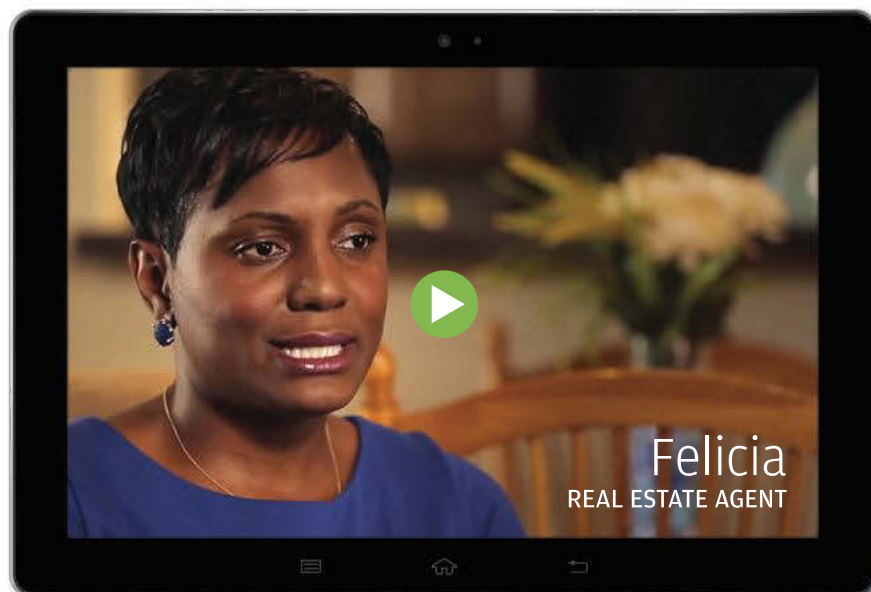

No one can predict what will happen with interest rates. If you think rates will go up, or if you don't want to have to worry about changing rates, it makes sense for you to lock in a rate. Most lenders prefer you lock in a rate once you're under contract on your new home. In the example above, locking in a rate of 4.0% instead of 4.5% would save a home buyer $21,075 over the life of a $200,000 30-year mortgage.

“With Chase, you can take the risk out of a months-long building process, and get peace of mind by securing a rate.” - Sam

CHASE

The Chase Rate Cap Program is available for fixed- and adjustable-rate agency, government, and nonconforming loans up to $2 million for the purchase of a new-build primary residence or a new-build second home. Not available for investment properties or refinance transactions. A 0.50% fee is charged for the Rate Lock Program and a 1.0% fee is charged for the Rate Cap Option. The fees are applied to closing costs if the loan closes before lock expiration. The fees are refunded if the loan is declined for credit reasons. All home lending products are subject to credit and property approval. Rates, program terms and conditions are subject to change without notice. movers tell all

Don't break the bank—or your back—transporting your possessions to a new home. Here, insider tips for a pain-free move.

big or little boxes?

"Lots of little boxes are better than a few big boxes. People tend to overload big boxes, which makes them tough to lift. As a general rule, the heavier the box, the smaller it should be."

—Jack Griffin, president and COO of Atlas Van Lines

get a few quotes

"Try for three estimates before settling on a moving company, and rule out the guys who will give you a quote only over the phone—you want an in-person visit. During the look-see, make sure they inspect the garage and attic before quoting you a price. Be wary of lowball estimates, and get it all in writing. And never hire a mover unless you check out protectyourmove.gov first. It has a database of reputable companies and a list of scammers to avoid."

—Kurt Larson, spokesperson for the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration

crunch numbers

"You can pay movers by the hour or a flat day rate. By the hour is riskier. If anything goes wrong and there are delays, costs can soar. But it's usually the cheaper choice if everything runs smoothly."

—Sperry Hutchinson, U-Haul International moving and product expert

Never, ever pack a box that weighs more than 50 pounds. Movers are strong, but even the Hulk with a hand truck has limits.

—Jack Griffin, president and COO of Atlas Van Lines

“Consider buying additional insurance coverage. Without it a moving company is only required to reimburse you 60 cents per pound—that’s $18 for a brand-new 30-pound TV.”

—Kurt Larson, spokesperson for the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration

"Bubble Wrap is overrated. In fact most high-end movers don't even use it. The best way to pack breakables is with six to eight sheets of plain 24-inch-by-36-inch newsprint paper, which you can buy at The Home Depot or Lowe's."

5 things to do with

It's knot hard at all to make these stylish projects.

1 form bowls

1. Flip a plastic bowl upside down, and place strips of double-sided tape on its base. Starting at the center of the base, begin coiling polyester rope (the tape will help hold it in place on the bowl). Continue coiling it around the bowl, hot-gluing the rope to itself as you go. Once you reach the bowl's rim, cut the rope, then remove the bowl and tape. Melt the rope's end with a match or a lighter so it doesn't unravel, and secure it with hot glue.

2. Paint the bottom third of the rope bowl with crafts paint. Let dry.

Water-resistant rope and a duct tape backing make this one sturdy mat!

3 coil it into a mat

1. Start coiling polypropylene utility cord as tightly as possible, hot-gluing the rope to itself and sticking strips of heavy-duty white duct tape underneath as you go.

2. Once you've coiled the rope so the mat is about 13 inches in diameter, cut the rope, then melt the end with a match or a lighter so it doesn't unravel, and secure it with hot glue.

3. Following the instructions in step 1, use a new color of rope to continue the coil until the mat is 19 inches in diameter. Finish the rope's end as described in step 2. Then continue the coil with the first color of rope until the mat is 24 inches in diameter. Finish the rope's end.

4. Trim any excess duct tape.

ROPE $\frac{3}{8}$ " polypropylene rope in blue with yellow tracer and yellow with red tracer, \$6.50 each for 50 feet, qualitynylonrope.com

2 add handles to a tray

1. Using a drill fitted with a $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch bit, drill two holes $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches apart on one side of a tray, so the handle you are making will be centered. Repeat on the opposite side of the tray.

2. Spray-paint the entire tray, and let dry.

3. Wrap the ends of an 18-inch-long piece of manila rope with electrical tape, and thread them through the holes. Knot the ends on the inside of the tray. Using scissors, trim the excess rope, including the part covered with tape. Repeat on the other side of the tray.

know the ropes!

Cotton Use this soft, easy-to-work-with rope, which comes in various thicknesses, for indoor projects.

Manila A classic natural rope, it works indoors and out. Find it in thicknesses up to 2 inches.

Braided nylon This flexible rope can be found in a wide variety of colors.

Polyester A slightly stiffer option, this paintable rope comes in white, black, tan, and blue.

Polypropylene utility cord This soft, water-resistant workhorse is often made up of two or three colors.

Polypropylene This water-resistant rope is great outdoors and comes in many thicknesses.

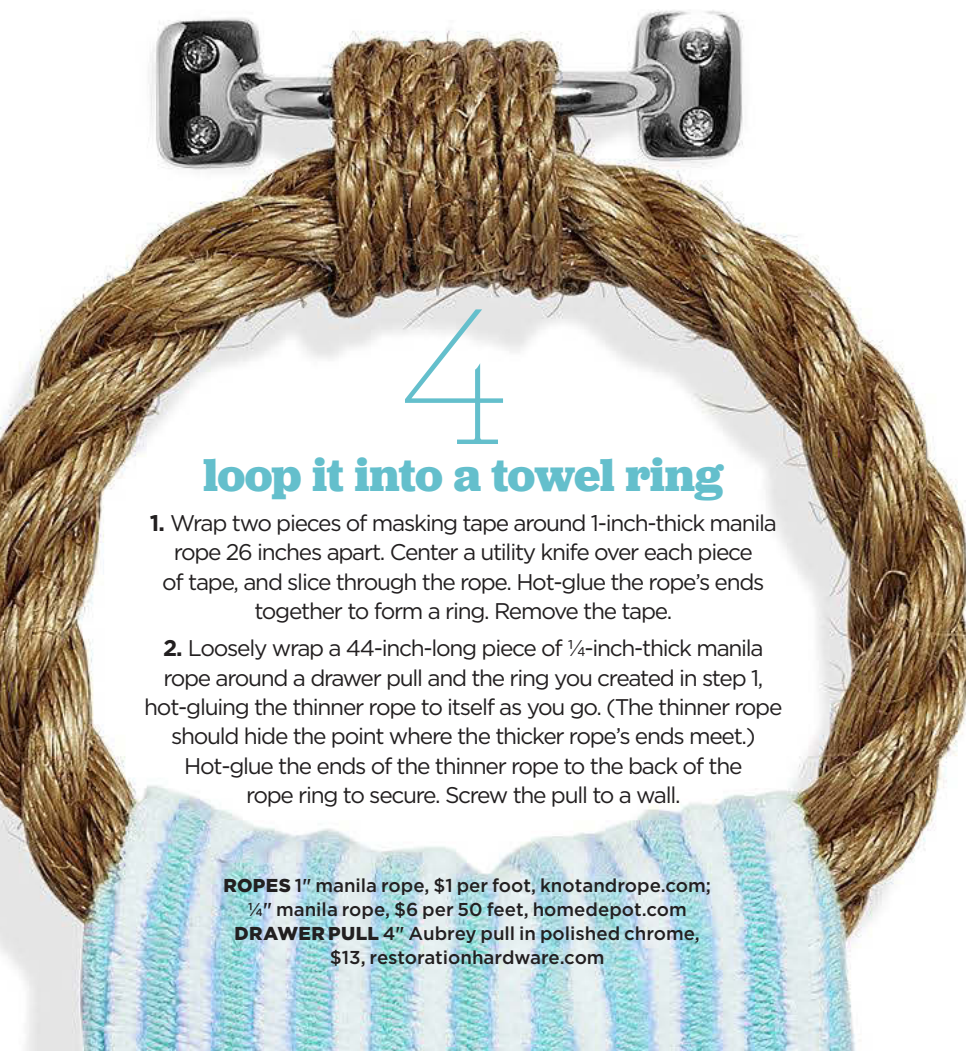

5 make a knot lamp

1. Using thick cotton rope, make a monkey fist knot around a 5-inch-diameter foam sphere (available at crafts stores). For a step-by-step knot how-to, go to hgtv.com/monkey-fist-knot.
2. Wrap a 5-inch-diameter lamp base with the same kind of rope you used in step 1, securing it with hot glue as you go. Dab the ends of the rope with hot glue so they don't fray.
3. Stick the pole from a lamp kit through the center of the knot, between the sections of rope. Screw the pole into the base, and wire the lamp following the kit's instructions. Add a lampshade.

loop it into a towel ring

1. Wrap two pieces of masking tape around 1-inch-thick manila rope 26 inches apart. Center a utility knife over each piece of tape, and slice through the rope. Hot-glue the rope's ends together to form a ring. Remove the tape.
2. Loosely wrap a 44-inch-long piece of 1/4-inch-thick manila rope around a drawer pull and the ring you created in step 1, hot-gluing the thinner rope to itself as you go. (The thinner rope should hide the point where the thicker rope's ends meet.) Hot-glue the ends of the thinner rope to the back of the rope ring to secure. Screw the pull to a wall.

Sheldon and Erin Bryan outside their 2,800-square-foot ranch house in Jacksonville, FL

This Florida couple used an eye-popping mix of patterns and colors to turn their 1965 home into the hippest spot on the block.

cool ranch

house tours

Bright white paint and a gray door (Meeting House White and Elegant Charcoal, both by Glidden) freshened up the classic one-story house.

although Erin and Sheldon Bryan loved the sprawling layout of the ranch home they bought last year, they didn't love its stuck-in-the-'60s decor. "It had awful wallpaper, and the floors were either heinous carpet or wood that felt hollow when you walked on it," says Erin. With three kids (Crichton, 14; Hendley, 10; and Byrdie, 8), four dogs, and two cats, the Bryans knew a down-to-the-studs reno was out of the question, so they focused on what they could update fast. That meant fresh paint, new wide-plank hardwood floors, and a not-for-the-faint-of-heart mix of graphic prints devised by local designer Andrew Howard. "Everywhere you look there's a pop of something fun," says Erin.

LIVING ROOM Since it's visible from the entry, Erin wanted the fireplace to make a statement. "I thought about hanging some artwork, but Andrew convinced me to make the fireplace itself the art," says Erin. A pattern of stenciled triangles gives the painted brick a tile-like look. It also anchors other pattern-happy pieces, including drapes made from Mark Alexander fabric. The sofas are covered in indoor/outdoor fabric—a solid navy by Pindler and a fun check by Christopher Farr—and piled with pillows. The armchair is covered in a solid navy by Pindler and a fun check by Christopher Farr—and piled with pillows.

Indigo starburst-print fabric by RP Miller jazzes up this Palecek armchair made of rattan and rope.

LIVING ROOM

Built-in cabinets in the living area hold the stereo system. Originally painted brown, they're now a vivid blue (Van Deusen Blue by Benjamin Moore). The striped painting is from Leftbank Art.

“I’m still surprised at how well all the patterns came together.”

DINING ROOM The dining space—which Erin usually reserves for parties—also got its own lively pattern mix: a geometric West Elm rug, shibori pillows, and a block-print tablecloth from Mrs. Howard, a chain of stores owned by Andrew’s family. Erin got the table from friends who import furniture from Argentina, and the chairs are from Mrs. Howard. An Arteriors Home chandelier highlights the vaulted ceilings.

CRICHTON'S ROOM

"People can't believe she can sleep in here, it's so bright," says Erin of her teenage daughter's room. "But she loves it." Diamond-print wallpaper by Lee Jofa establishes the electric pink color scheme, and all-white furniture (a DucDuc bed and Bungalow 5 side tables) helps calm everything down.

HENDLEY'S ROOM

With only one small window, little sis Hendley's room could have felt closed in, but a Technicolor combo of turquoise MissPrint wallpaper, a green-and-white PBteen rug, and a rainbow PBteen duvet cover cheer it up. "Our kids are full speed, and so is this room," says Erin.

Surf Blue by Benjamin Moore

BYRDIE'S ROOM For her son's bedroom, Erin chose a boyish palette of navy and apple red. The family had the stacked bunk beds, outfitted in Serena & Lily sheets and pillows from High Fashion Home, in their old house. All the frame needed was a fresh coat of paint (Currant Red by Benjamin Moore). The striped rug is from PBteen.

Mary Kay's most jaw-dropping bargain: a 1930s collapsible walnut camp cot that she nabbed for just $10 at an estate sale. Cozied up with mattress-ticking pillows and bolsters, it's a favorite spot for midday naps and doing puzzles with the grandkids. The mismatched rattan chairs, found at an estate sale, have identical cushions sewn from an awning-striped fabric from Warehouse Fabrics, so they look like a set.

junk never looked so good!

It's an endless vacation at this carefree beach cottage, loaded with the best deals under the sun.

a gung-ho antiquer, Mary Kay Andrews has braved dust-choked attics, swampy cellars, and cobwebbed toolsheds in pursuit of secondhand steals. But even this champion rummager had her dollar-stretching skills tested when she and husband Tom Trocheck purchased a dingy 1932 cottage on Tybee Island, GA, in 2013. With more than 2,000 square feet to furnish and fix up—and a desire to stick to a budget—Mary Kay, a best-selling author of feel-good beach reads, used all her scavenging smarts to transform the dated home into a laid-back seaside retreat. Now filled with upcycled treasures and rehabbed castoffs, it's ideal for mellow family vacations—and banging out her next page-turner. “I get inspired when I write here,” she says. “My books feature plucky women reinventing themselves, and there’s always a happy ending. And that’s the story of this house.”

CHAIR

Mary Kay calls this sofa, with its extra-deep down cushions, “the couch of no return.” Beach Town, her 23rd book, hit stores in May.

living room

For an airy island vibe, the living room's board-and-batten paneling was painted crisp scallop-shell white (Parchment White by Glidden). The neutral walls serve as a backdrop for a rotating collection of inexpensive, casually propped waterscapes and the deep blue of the sofa Mary Kay found on Craigslist. She scored the 16-yard bolt of upholstery-grade denim used to cover it for $25 at an estate sale. The round walnut coffee table is a hand-me-down freebie—it's the kitchen table from Mary Kay's girlhood home cut down to 21 inches tall.

kitchen

In the remodeled kitchen, one-of-a-kind finds—a vintage cast-iron farmhouse sink and a 1950s supermarket sign—downplay the newness of the cabinets, granite counters, and subway tile backsplash. Also adding character: a battered Oriental rug Mary Kay purchased years ago and squirreled away. The café curtains are sewn out of cotton fabric from IKEA, and the throwback blue pendant is from Barn Light Electric.

porch

The pine table, snatched up at an Atlanta bookstore's going-out-of-business sale, has sentimental value for Mary Kay: She once did book signings at it. Teamed with an oak church pew that came with the house and 1940s chairs with new fabric cushions from Ballard Designs, it turns a sunny part of the porch into a cheerful dining area for six—with ocean views. The olive-basket pendant light is an original that Tom created.

dining room

By keeping most of the dining room as is—the table, side chairs, and Sunbeam sign were included in the sale of the house—Mary Kay could splurge on a metal chandelier from a Circa Lighting warehouse sale. “Its size balances out the 9-foot ceilings,” she says. Updated with blue-and-white buffalo-check slipcovers, armchairs from a hotel furniture resale store could pass for brand-new.

It's a look-alike of a highly collectible (and pricey) wool swimming costume, but the framed one-piece is actually a 1970s polyester bathing suit. "I found it at an antiques shop while I was on a book tour in Ohio," says Mary Kay. A carved oak buffet that's original to the house feels less fussy thanks to rustic lamps made from 1940s hand-crank metal ice cream churns unearthed on eBay.

A four-poster Ethan Allen bed found on Craigslist repeats the color of the en suite bathroom's black claw-foot tub and vanity. To beachify the salvaged bench, Mary Kay painted it white and stapled on red-and-white-striped fabric. A mirror described on Craigslist as a “Harry Potter looking glass” got Mary Kay’s thrifting radar pinging, especially when the listing turned out to be for an ornately carved Victorian stunner. Since the house came with the black-and-white vanity, tub, and floor tiles, she kept the color combo going with a ruffled-bottom Pottery Barn shower curtain.

junking like a pro

Mary Kay's top snag-a-deal tricks.

● Go to the right sales.

Mary Kay doesn't sugarcoat it: "Dead people have the best stuff." Estate sales on behalf of the recently departed or the elderly will usually yield better finds than a young couple's garage sale. Visit estatesale.com for listings near you.

● The timid go home empty-handed. No shrinking violet, Mary Kay always carries a pen and masking tape so she can stick SOLD signs on bulky items she wants but can't lug to the checkout. She's also not afraid to throw out an offer: "While junking at a house that was about to be torn down, I asked if they'd take $200 for the floorboards. I got 'em!"

● Accept that you'll buy clunkers. Lamps with European wiring, tables with rickety legs, smelly chairs—Mary Kay has unwittingly bought them all. But it's OK to make mistakes. Take it as a learning experience and move on to the next great sale.

fan flower

It looks delicate, but this Australia native effortlessly shrugs off extreme temps and humidity, sprouting purple, periwinkle, or white flowers all summer. Let its trailing stems cascade from a container or spread as ground cover in areas with full sun to partial shade. Usually grown as an annual, fan flower requires only moderate watering during even the hottest days.

lantana

Perfect for sunbaked spots, this no-fail butterfly-baiting annual (which is a perennial in areas that don't get frost) packs a ton of color in each cluster of tiny flowers. It comes in vivid shades of pink, orange, yellow, coral, purple, and red, and it's often two- or three-toned. Plant it in early summer and it will bloom until frost.*

periwinkle

This tiny annual flourishes in full sun, scorching heat, and average soil and requires little watering. Plant seedlings in early summer for vibrant pink, red, or lavender blooms until frost. Try one of the trailing Mediterranean varieties in a hanging basket or in a border. While easy to grow, the plant can develop fungus, so clean up dead leaves, and don't overwater.*

globe amaranth

No rain? No problem for this annual, which happily grows in desert-like weather. Plant it in spring and you'll see tall pom-pom-shaped blooms in purple, pink, red, or white into fall. Bonus: Birds love it.*

mexican sunflower

This cheery annual puts out daisy-like flowers in orange, red, or yellow that bees and butterflies love. It's easy to start from seed. If you plant a large variety, just make sure to give them space—and be prepared to stake them if they become unruly. Mexican sunflower thrives in full sun all summer long and is very drought-tolerant once it gets going.*

butter daisy

Gardeners love this yellow star-shaped annual as much as birds, bees, and butterflies do for good reason: All it needs is full sun and regular watering until it's established (about six weeks), then it can survive drought. It's also deer-resistant, making it a smart choice for flower beds in areas with a lot of wildlife.*

blanket flower

This perennial sprouts frilly flowers in orange, yellow, or red (or a combo of the three) from summer into fall. Dwarf varieties grow on bushy 10-to-12-inch-tall plants; bigger varieties reach 24 to 30 inches. Plant it from seed or try seedlings in beds or pots.*

phlox intensia

If you want to up the wow factor in your yard, plant this heat-loving annual. It attracts butterflies, tolerates drought, doesn't mind humidity, and provides pretty white, pink, or purple blooms from summer until your area's first frost. It grows to only about a foot tall, but it spreads in the sun, making it perfect for filling in containers or flower beds.*

There's nothing like soaking up some rays.

This velvety-looking annual requires hardly any attention—or water—once established as long as it's planted in an area with full sun. Find it in a variety of shapes and a spectrum of fiery shades, including gold, tangerine, scarlet, and magenta. Grow it from seed or seedlings for electric color well into the fall.

* = drought-tolerant

This icon IDs plants that are naturally adapted to dry, arid conditions. That means once they're established, they can live through long periods—up to an entire season—without significant amounts of water.

DIY CAT CASTLES

Who doesn't love a good challenge?

We rounded up the DIY Network made + remade bloggers, and asked them to take on a pet project with pizzazz. Here are our favorite cool, crafty cat castles, which will help any pet live like a king.

MAKE YOUR OWN!
Get step-by-step how-tos for these projects at maderemade.com/catcastles

"CAMP MEOW" TENT

For a cat who shies away from rambunctious crowds (read: children), Lish Dorset crafted this campy, private cat tent. The avid crafter and sewing guru took her design cues from vintage-chic campground style to make a no-sew tent that opens on both ends, giving her pet plenty of space to stretch out and enjoy the good life.

SNOOZE TUBES

Inspiration can come from anywhere, as Ellen Foord shows with her cat-nap pyramid. Looking for materials with a modern shape, she had an "Aha!" moment with cardboard tubes normally used for creating concrete posts. She cut the tubes, and covered them in felt, fleece, and sisal. Now Ellen's three family cats have a scratch-friendly snooze spot.

A REAL CAT TREE

Felines love indulging their natural instinct to perch up high in the forest and survey the surroundings. For indoor cats who can only dream of the rugged outdoor-cat lifestyle, Mick Telkamp created this cat tree from branches found in his backyard. His easy project combines natural appeal with the comfort of carpeted platforms for climbing and lounging.

The first natural cat food from RACHAEL RAY™ NUTRISH®. Real meat like chicken or fish is the #1 ingredient in these delicious recipes. There's never any junk like poultry by-product meal, artificial flavors or artificial preservatives. Look for these wholesome recipes where you currently shop for your family's groceries.

shopping guide

The listed websites may not always offer online ordering, but they will provide all the information needed to buy what you want, including the store nearest you. Some items may be listed as discontinued, custom, or vintage. Sites such as craigslist.org, ebay.com, and etsy.com are great resources to find similar styles. If something is listed as “trade only,” the design professionals at decorativebuyingservice.com can purchase these items on your behalf.

“I’m a total Yankee-Doodle on the Fourth, so this pitcher rocks. I’ll use it for drinks or fill it with little party-favor flags.”

—David Bromstad,
Beach Flip

I want something red, white, and blue. What can I buy that’s stylish?

“Crisp stripes in thick and thin widths make this pillow a winner. Thanks to the outdoor-friendly fabric, it can comfy up hard patio chairs.”

—Genevieve Gorder,
HGTV designer

“On horribly humid days, you have to give guests extra-tall tumblers like these. And the bright red matches my kitchen range. Score!”

—John Colaneri,
America’s Most Desperate Kitchens

“This woven basket has an old-time Americana vibe that I love. Keep it by the back door, and toss bottles of sunscreen in it.”
